

Professional Learning Funding Resources in the U.S.

Your guide to procuring funds for a district-wide subscription to edweek.org.

General Fund

Your district likely already has an annual budget line item for professional learning. Those funds can be used to purchase a district-wide subscription to Education Week to provide this important professional learning resource to all your teachers, principals, and staff.

Federal Grants

- Title II-A: These funds are meant to support improving teacher and principal quality, including through professional learning.
- Title I, Part A: These funds are meant to improve outcomes for disadvantaged students, including professional learning for teachers and administrators.

Other Grants

The federal Department of Education also runs other grant programs which vary over time. You can see the current open grants here.

Private Grants

Local businesses or foundations that support education, including your school district foundation (if you have one), may provide grants to enable your district to access Education Week.

State Grants

Your state's Department of Education likely has grants available. Check the department's website to learn more.
