Be Ready When Parents Ask These 7 Questions About Data Privacy

Seven questions that parents should be asking their children’s schools about student data privacy—offering a roadmap for the issues that K-12 leaders should be prepared to discuss.

1. Which websites, services, and apps will my child’s classroom use this year?
2. How does my school handle directory information?
3. What is my school’s approach to school safety, and what does it mean for my child’s privacy?
4. Does my child’s school administer surveys?
5. What are the rules for recording devices in my child’s school?
6. How is my child’s information secured?
7. How does the school train teachers and staff to protect student information?

Image: Getty

SOURCE: Future of Privacy Forum